BOOSTING YOUR INTERNET MINISTRY

May 19, 2012, 12:13 am

The internet has many resources to grow your ministry and allow you to keep church members in the loop

Ministers and church leaders have increasingly turned to the Internet to build connections with their congregations. Some ministers even specialize in online outreach programs. Individuals who have received their online ordination from Universal Life Church can seize upon many opportunities to build their ministries through the Internet.

Building a virtual congregation is a great way for a minister to reach out and share his or her faith. In some areas, wedding officiants are required to maintain a regular congregation to whom they preach. For some individuals who choose to get ordained for free online, this can present a significant challenge. How can you build a solid ministry without having to rent or build a worship building? Many ministers have turned to the online environment to build their congregations. Internet ministry allows the ordained to share their faith to a worldwide audience, often at no cost.

Individuals who have pursued online ordination or who participate in these american marriage ministries can use the following tips to build and enhance online ministry outreach. Individuals who are not familiar with social networking sites may wish to consult online tutorials to learn the basics of using these powerful tools.

Tweet About Your Internet Ministry – Twitter is popular among individuals of all age groups because it provides a quick, easy way to communicate to users worldwide. Consider choosing a Twitter username and sending out faith-based messages. You can use the Twitter platform to invite individuals to live events or to promote your ministry website. Twitter also provides a great way to interact with followers. Find the Universal Life Church on Twitter.

Build A Facebook Following – Facebook is one of the most popular social networking sites in the world. On Facebook, you should build a personal page for yourself that denotes your affiliation with the Universal Life Church. You can also
